LOT 8799 - WWII Era SCR-625-C Mine Detector

Description

Good condition for the age of the equipment.

Changing the course of warfare. Mines were cheap, easy to make, and even easier to disperse. Turning fields and strategic foot holds, into dead man's land.

This SCR-625-C Mine Detector was the first portable mine detector standardized by the US military 1942. Seeing success in the Allied North African front. Troops swept for mines clearing safe travels for Shermans, Jeeps, and troops alike. America's first mine detector did it's job well, saving countless lives and continued being used into the following Korean War.

Watch your step! You're gonna need this cool piece of American Military history in your personal collection!
